

How to Change Languages in Internet Browsers: English

Microsoft Edge

Automatic Translation

When you visit a page written in a language different from your preferred languages, Microsoft Edge will automatically prompt you to translate it.

1. Look for the Translate icon in the address bar when you encounter a foreign language page.
2. Choose the language you want to translate the page into from the dropdown.
3. Click on Translate.
4. You can also select the “Always translate from [Language]” option to automatically translate from the source language.

Manual Translation

If you've set Microsoft Edge to never translate a specific language, you won't see automatic prompts, however, you can still manually translate it.

1. Click the Translate icon in the address bar.
2. Select the desired target language.
3. Click Translate.

Adjust Settings

To modify translation settings:

1. Go to ellipses to the right of the address bar.
2. Click on Settings.
3. Click on Languages.
4. Enable or disable “Offer to translate pages that aren't in a language I read.”

Google Chrome

Automatic Translation

When you encounter a foreign language page, Chrome will offer to translate it.

1. Click the Translate icon in the address bar.
2. Choose your preferred language.

3. Chrome will translate the current webpage.

Manual Translation

1. Highlight a section of text on the page.
2. Right-click and select Translate selection to [Language].

Adjust Settings

To control translation behavior:

1. Click More (three dots) > Settings.
2. Go to Languages.
3. Turn Use Google Translate on or off.
4. Choose the default language for translation.

Mozilla Firefox

Automatic Translation

- Firefox's translation feature continuously translates webpages in real-time.
- No data leaves your device, ensuring privacy.
- Supported languages include Spanish, English, German, Bulgarian, Portuguese, Italian, and more

Manual Translation

1. Click the Firefox Translations icon in the address bar.
2. Choose a language to translate into.

Adjust Settings

No need to enable or disable; translations are private by design.
